Two cooks at the Grand Hotel in Janpathn, New Delhi, were seriously hurt in an explosion sparked off by a leak from a gas cylinder in the hotel kitchen yesterday. The blast occurred at half past eleven and was followed by a fire in which three kitchen helpers also suffered burn injuries. The injured persons were rushed to Wellington Hospital by the hotel management.

The two seriously injured cooks are in the Intensive Care Unit of the hospital. At the time of the incident two cooks were busy with preparations for a buffet lunch at the hotel restaurant. Another kitchen helper, Azim Ali described the scene thus: "I was near the kitchen sink cutting up vegetables for the chef when I heard the blast. I saw the chef go up in flames and he was screaming. It was a horrible sight."

Police discovered that one of the cooks was replacing an empty gas cylinder in the basement kitchen when the explosion occurred. This has made the police remind the public to be more careful when changing gas cylinders and to make sure there is no flame nearby. Also make sure that the cylinders and pipes are in good condition. Pipes must be frequently replaced. If the smell of gas is noticed in the kitchen, the safety valve should be closed and someone from the gas company should be called at once.
