Larry and Phillip went to collect some items in the woods for their science project. Their plan was to go for one hour and get as much as they could. As they began, their scheme was working because they were gathering many items including moss, wild flowers, tree bark, ferns, and grass. They had an enormous pile of stuff, and it was beginning to be too much to carry. Because they had such a collection, they had to slow their pace of collecting items. Their pile was getting huge so they had a fight over what items to keep. In their dispute, Larry thought they should keep the wild flowers but Phillip did not. They finally agreed about what to keep and finished their searching.

As they went to go home, they noticed the rocks that they used to guide them into the forest were gone. They had nothing to lead them back; they were lost. Larry was very afraid, but Phillip was determined and discovered their way back home.

In the end, Larry and Phillip got an A+ on their science project, which was well worth their adventure.
